I called Bruce back
& told him you had no
inside info about this either. He has talked with Proctor about it
since his first call
to me & says Proctor
has it well in hand.

I don't think the Director will be very happy about ACD A's
plans to push us out
in front on these hearings,
however.

Mr. Murray:

Jack,

Gerry Smith probably will be sending this or something like it over to the Director soon.

You might be reviewing to see what guidance we would have
to give on who has
what access to TK and

DRAFT - February 2, 1970

MEMORANDUM FOR THE DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE

SUBJECT: Briefing Congress on National Means of Verifying SALT

As SALT moves along it will become necessary to provide selected Members of Congress and key Committee Staff members with information bearing on key elements of the positions we take in the talks. I have in mind especially information relating to the question of the verifiability of any proposed arrangement. We should be prepared to furnish information about our present and future national intelligence capabilities--what we know about the Soviet military posture and plans, what we know about Soviet research and testing, how we acquire this information, and the confidence we have in our conclusions. While it will not be necessary to disclose all the details of the collection and analysis process, some illustrative examples should be available, along the lines we have requested for the NATO briefings.

The Congressional audiences will vary. I have enclosed a list of Members and Committee Staff people to whom we should be prepared to give general briefings related to verification. At the head of the list are the names of a few "key" Members to whom we should also be prepared to give more detailed information as developments require. Certain other Members and several key staff members will probably have to be added to this list.

As we prepare for appearances on the Hill to discuss SALT, it would be helpful if we could arrive at a determination of what may be disclosed. The problem will arise in two separate but related contexts:

(1) Prearranged briefings covering relevant technical aspects of the verification problem. As indicated above, I believe two versions of these briefings would be appropriate, general briefings for the full Committee shown on the enclosed list and a more detailed briefing for closely restricted audiences. I would hope CIA would prepare such briefings, with assistance from ACDA and other agencies as appropriate.

(2) Guidelines as to what ACDA and other Administration representatives may say concerning U.S. verification capabilities in the course of Congressional hearings on SALT at which such matters as our preparatory efforts, approved U.S.

positions, and possible arms control arrangements would be discussed. We must also anticipate very pointed questioning on this aspect of SALT, and I would appreciate your suggestions as to how Administration spokesmen should handle these questions.

Bruce Clarke has been very helpful in exploring this matter, and I have asked _____ and _____ to work with your representatives in developing the briefings and guidance that are now needed.

I have discussed this proposal with the Secretary of State and it has his full support.

Gerard Smith
